3 SISTERS COLLECTION

Our trademarked 3 Sisters Collection of handbags is what we're known for. Inspired by our founder and her two sisters, this collection represents how sisters stand up for, support, laugh and cry with each other. We are each other's biggest cheerleaders and will defend each other to a fault. We are also each other's harshest critics, setting each other straight like only a sister can do.

Every woman can appreciate and relate to the unbreakable bond of a sister, whether it be through blood or by choice. And when you see the 3 studs, you know there is a story behind that design every sister can relate to.

A LETTER FROM THE President

To Our Valued Customers, Leaseholders, and Sales Representatives,

As we look ahead to 2026, the Minneapolis Gift Mart stands poised at an exciting moment in its history. New leases, refreshed spaces, and innovative ideas are shaping a future that honors our legacy while embracing progress and possibility.

Vision 2026 represents our shared commitment —to grow, connect, and inspire. Together, we are reimagining our showrooms, renewing partnerships, and building momentum for a vibrant new chapter.

Growing together means evolving side by side—listening, learning, and leading with creativity, integrity, and care.

It means remaining true to the values that define us: dedication, hospitality, and the strong sense of community that reflects the spirit of the Upper Midwest.

It also means celebrating the importance of shopping local —bringing makers, merchants, and buyers together under one roof to strengthen our shared success.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR CONTINUED PARTNERSHIP AND TRUST. YOUR SUPPORT AND BELIEF IN THIS COMMUNITY ILLUMINATE THE PATH FORWARD!

With sincere gratitude and optimism,

Tracy Will-Pomeroy

RETAILER SECRETS REVEALED

3 RETAILER SECRETS TO GET THE MOST FROM YOUR SALES REP!

Dawn Grooters is the founder of Broken Vessel Sales Solutions and creator of Hybrid Sales Advantage™ and Inside Sales Advantage™. With over 20 years in the Gift & Home industry, she's done it all—from corporate buying to outside sales and leading inside sales teams. After a personal tragedy in 2011, Dawn discovered the power of inside sales to create stronger customer connections and better balance.

Since launching Broken Vessel Sales Solutions in 2019, she has trained hundreds of sales reps and helped companies grow through practical sales strategies, customer segmentation, and simple CRM systems. Dawn equips sales professionals to connect with more customers, close more orders, and create consistent sales—without sacrificing their sanity.

Retailers are wearing many hats.
You are the accountant, schedule master, product buyer, visual merchandiser, customer service expert, marketer, and sales professional. Maybe you knew that going into owning your store, but other titles you didn't anticipate are therapist, mentor, and guidance counselor for your staff.

Rarely do you get help with all these positions without hiring someone else to fill these specific roles. But did you know you have a resource that would help you with some of these roles if you utilized your local sales rep and the value they provide?

Sales reps can bring an immense amount of value to your business if you let them without adding them to your pay roll.

Sales reps can help you by recommending products and curate product assortments, help you with merchandising ideas, take customer service issues off your plate for vendors, provide you with marketing ideas, and offer training to sell the products you purchased through them. These are things your computer can't do, but your sales rep can.

The question is, are you leaning into your sales rep's expertise and letting them add value to you? Their payment for this value is the commission they receive from the products you buy, which makes both the retailer and the sales rep money.

I was speaking with some retailers about this topic and one of those retailers told me "If I had a sales rep call me today and ask me what I needed, I would tell them I need a $1000 order of your top-selling faux florals. Put that order together for me and I would approve it." My next question was, did you call your sales rep and tell them that, and this retailer said no, I don't have time.

The disappointing part of this conversation is that both the retailer and the sales rep lost in this situation. The retailer lost sales from low inventory and the sales rep lost the opportunity to help that retailer on an order that could have resulted in commission. That's exactly why I have created sales training programs to help minimize these situations.

The truth is, we (retailers and sales reps) must work smarter not harder, together. Retailers need sales reps, and sales reps need retailers. We just need to communicate better with each other and be transparent.

If retailers want to be a sales reps favorite account and receive the full value of a sales rep, then a retailer needs to know these three retailer secrets that will set them apart from the hundreds of customers your sales rep works with.

1 Tell your sales reps how you want to work with them.

Every retailer works differently which is good, but it can be hard for a sales rep to manage if they don't know. From different buying cycles and communication preferences to different product preferences, your sales rep needs to know how you like to work. Do you want them to visit your store? Do you want them to text you instead of emailing you? Do buy once a year or buy every month? It doesn't matter how you like to work; it just matters that your sales rep knows how you want to work them, and they will make it happen.

They can keep track of your preferences in a CRM and meet your needs, because ultimately that is what they want. After having thousands of conversations with retailers over the years, some retailers have told me a sales rep won't get an order unless they walk in my store. And I have had other retailers tell me, "I don't want you in my store, I don't have time for you to visit. Just send me an email and I will order what I need that way."

So, secret is to communicate with your sales reps how, when, and where you want to work with them and they will make it happen. This the beauty of sales reps having the ability to work hybrid to meet their retailer's needs. This includes the sales reps being flexible to work with retailers in-person, through phone outreach, emails, texts, and at trade shows.

2 Tell them what you need and what you don't need.

Sales reps wish they could read your mind, but sorry they can't. If you tell your sales reps what you need such as certain products, themes in your stores, promotions, and inventory, they will take care of your needs.

They just need to know. Just like if you tell the sales rep that you don't need another product line in a certain category, they will respect your wishes and move onto something you do need. The transparency helps both you the retailer and the sales rep be more effective and efficient.

3 Give your sales reps permission to offer value.

Sales rep don't want to annoy you or bug you, so give them permission to add value to you and your store. Sales reps can save you money and save you time while helping you to sell more, just give them the permission to do that.

For instance, if you place an order and the sales rep knows that if you ordered $200 more, you could save $200 in freight. You want to know that, right?

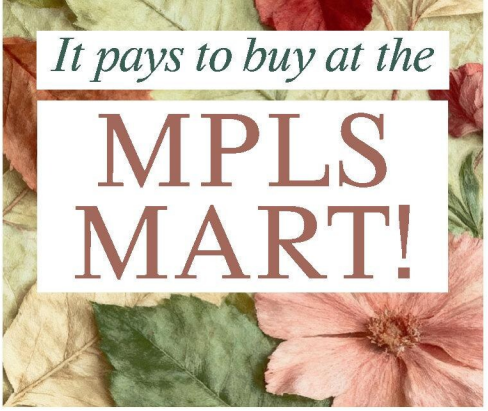

By giving your sales rep permission to offer you value, they won't hesitate to call you back and tell you the 3 items you should add to your order to meet that $200 threshold and receive the freight discount.

They can save you time by offering suggested orders with top sellers, but if you don't give them permission to help you in these ways, they may not do it. They don't want to waste your time or theirs.

These three secrets may sound super simple, and they are. But they will make a tremendous difference in how your sales reps can add value and work with you on your specified terms. You will see results and the sales rep will appreciate the clarity, because they can stop guessing and start working smarter for you.

Finally, you will have the sales rep be the business partner that knows how you like to work, what you need, and that they can offer you value without hesitation.

PANACHE APPAREL
Panache Apparel is a woman-owned business that began in 2012. We are about living with style, having fun, promoting self-confidence, staying strong, keeping it casual, letting loose, being unwavering in our pursuits, living boldly and proudly, and promoting what we like. We started on the basis of wanting to express how we think and feel without having to compromise on quality of fabric or aesthetic. We started by offering collections of trending, alternative accessories and slowly built out into a full apparel brand. Above all, our designs are steeped in quality and attention to detail, but add in some wild, some sass, and a lot of badass.

LUNCH & LEARN

Our Lunch & Learn series is back - and better than ever!

Join us at noon in the café during MPLS MART shows for dynamic sessions designed to energize your year and elevate your business. We've lined up powerful speakers who will share proven retail strategies, fresh insights, and practical tools you can put to work immediately!

Don't miss your chance to enjoy lunch and gain game-changing ideas, connect with industry peers, and position your business for growth in 2026 and beyond.

Mark your calendar, plan to attend, and stay in the loop!

Make sure you're on our email list and following us on Facebook so you never miss a Mart event!
